Information is the backbone of the pending protests.

How do I find what I need for the days to come:
food, a place to stay, sanitary facilities, trusting people?
What happened so far, what's going on right now?
When and how do I get to exactly the action fitting myself - in view of the wide range of activities planned?

All justified questions. We want to help to find answers to such questions.
This is the reason to organize the i-points.

Fixed i-points are planned for the camps and the convergence centers;
additional at Rostock, Bad Doberan and Kröpelin; a mobile i-point will try to always be at the right spot during the action days.

Our i-points are nods in a network. We ask everybody to be part of it.
The conditions: you are able to read a map, to count people, to look at the watch, to explain to people what happens in a few words:
the come along to the next i-point or call us! Your report and hundreds of other puzzle parts will make up the picture of the situation. This generates a counter-publicity from the view of the participants.

We regard it as our task in the i-point network to collect timely and secured information. Our public relations work is not aimed at producing headlines or to boom
but to focus on a competent and true assessment of the situation for every body.

Donation for the i-points

Bad Doberan in april 2007

Hello,

we have used the back-page of the letter to illustrate the way we would like to carry out the project "i-points at G8" during the action days. If ten-thousands of people will meet for the summit protests, they will expect something like this and we believe they have the right to expect it.

Despite all the engagement of the group of 50 media-workers involved in the project at the moment, we still need money or other funds to go on.
That's why we are asking for donations.

We would like to ensure that everybody will be able to do the optimum.
And this project is also designed to challenge the point of view that information is an economic good meaning power. Please support us!

Please remit any donations to:

Donations in kind will, of course, be appreciated as well.
Please ask by mail or offer something to us.
